Rising U.S. rates are taking a toll on EM bonds as shown by the negative return of 3.12% of the EMBI Global bond index so far this year. The average yield of dollar-denominated emerging market bonds is 5.25% at the end of April, up nearly three quarter of a point since January. Local currency bonds have erased all their 2018 gains in a few days, under pressure from a firmer dollar. Renewed sanctions against Russia, threats of trade tariffs against China and the possibility of the USA axing the Iran deal are contributing to current the risk-off mood. A lot of negative news is priced in the market but the conditions for a durable rebound are not present yet. With a slightly positive return of 0.32% year-to-date, BCPEMFI compares favorably to peers, mostly thanks to its short duration. On April 27th BCPEMFI paid its annual dividend. This year's dividend is USD 5.46 per share, or 5.44% of the NAV. No major transaction to report last month.

Fund's Objective

The Fund's objective is to maximize capital growth over the medium term and to generate income through investments in bonds and other debt securities issued or guaranteed by national or local governments of emerging and / or other issuers domiciled in emerging countries. The Fund may invest to a lesser extent in units of other collective investments schemes, in derivative financial instruments (including warrants), as well as structured products. The use of derivative financial instruments is an integral part of the investment strategy and they are not used solely for hedging purposes. Investments are mainly USD denominated, but to a lesser extent can also be denominated in other currencies, including local currency of emerging countries. To achieve this objective, the investment policy of the Fund is to choose the best possible opportunities in the fixed income universe of emerging markets. The Fund's investment approach can be described as "bottom up" that is to say, the choice of investments will be made according to their fundamental qualities rather than trying to replicate an index and its weights.
